

Influential Women of Los Angeles

After spending nearly 15 years in the private home staffing industry, founder and CEO Gold Porter has built a reputation for doing whatever it takes to help her clients simplify their lives.

While Gold's most long-term clients will tell you that she's got a near magical way of delivering the right candidate at precisely the right time, Gold says that for her, any magic she might have is thanks to the power of streamlining and efficiency.

"Whether we're placing administrative assistants, butlers, caregivers, and chefs, or we're matching families with the right executive assistants, private educators, and more, our goal is to help expand our clients' lifestyles so they can be more efficient," says Gold. "To do this, I've built a phenomenal team of recruiters with specific expertise in their areas of home staffing, and we match for personality as much as we match for skill."

Offering everything from payroll services to full-service co-employment, Riveter Consulting Group acts as a one-stop-shop for its clients, delivering the exact services needed - without any of the complicated layers that can often show up during hiring or turnover.

"I've always been a natural connector, and that's how I show up at Riveter Consulting Group, too," says Gold. "I'm driven to connect our clients with the right candidate because I believe that those perfect matches are key to helping my clients build more enjoyable lives."
